Official notice of prospective losses of MIR Trade AG, denial and request for voluntary retraction– EU Today - article by Paul Graham, posted online on 14 June 2019

Paul Graham published an online article on the website of EU Today on 14 June 2019, which contained a passage about MIR Trade AG that was absolutely untrue. MIR Trade AG vehemently denies these allegations and strongly criticizes the publication of these fake news.

MIR Trade AG has sent an official letter to EU Today demanding the removal of the false paragraph in the said article. EU Today ignored the letter by refusing receipt.

Paul Graham/EU Today refer to an article on the Ukrainian media platform censor.net.ua and an online article by Forbes.

The Forbes article, which the article by censor.net.ua was based on, was corrected afterwards, because of a claim of incorrect information. In this article MIR Trade AG is not mentioned at all for obvious reasons.

Censor.net.ua, in its turn, did not correct its article, although its source has obviously proven to be incorrect.

Paul Graham/EU Today, who had basically taken over the article from censor.net.ua into English, did not correct their article either.

Hereby MIR Trade AG puts you on notice concerning prospective losses of MIR Trade AG.

The misinformation may be relied upon by banks resulting in financial losses of MIR Trade AG. Consequently, MIR Trade AG will be compelled to claim any and all such losses from your side with all judicial, legal costs to be at your account.

MIR Trade AG expressly declines any connections which were claimed in this article and requests to promptly remove (retract) the misinformation voluntarily.
